

Telecommunications

Born out of our Land Use, Zoning & Development practice, our Telecom practice employs a multidisciplinary approach to best serve the needs of our clients – FCC licensed wireless carriers, cell tower companies, DAS and small cell providers, cable companies, fiber optic wholesalers, landline telephone operators, public utilities and data center developers – who routinely count on us to navigate the ever-evolving telecommunications regulatory environment.

Our multidisciplinary team of litigators, transactional and corporate counsel, and zoning, regulatory and permitting attorneys, gives us the ability to quickly and seamlessly tackle your most complex legal challenges – from intricate real estate transactions, complicated municipal negotiations, State Historic Preservation Office (SHPO) compliance issues to contentious zoning and environmental permitting.

Cuddy & Feder’s telecommunications lawyers regularly consult on federal, state and municipal legislative matters that may impact the successful, cost effective and expeditious build-out of wireless networks and infrastructure, both in the Northeast – New York and Connecticut – and nationally. Our law firm’s knowledge of wireless technologies and comprehensive understanding of municipal processes and agency concerns allows us to creatively develop the most effective solutions to meet your objectives.
