Dan is an associate in the firm's Land Use, Zoning & Development and Telecommunications groups. His practice includes all aspects of municipal law, planning and land use. Dan provides a personalized service guiding clients through the various permitting and zoning processes necessary to use and develop their property. He uses effective and efficient methods to apply the various federal, state and local regulations to advocate for regulatory approvals and help clients attain their specific goals.

Prior to joining Cuddy & Feder, Dan worked at a firm in Tarrytown, NY specializing in the practice of zoning, municipal, and land use law. He provided counsel for several municipality boards as well as private clients on matters regarding SEQRA, General Municipal Law, Town Law, Village Law, and Highway Law. Dan's experience representing both public and private sides of the municipal and land use matters provides him with a unique experience and insight that allows him to provide superior legal service.

Dan graduated from Illinois State with a Bachelor of Science degree in Criminal Justice and graduated cum laude from Pace University School of Law. During law school, Dan was an Articles Group Editor for the Pace Environmental Law Review and interned with Pace's Land Use Law Center, a city corporation counsel's office, and a land use and municipal law firm in White Plains.
